Factory price d curve breaker in Belgium

What is a D-curve breaker?

D-curve breakers are suitable for circuits with high inrush currents, such as motors. They handle 10-20 times the nominal current. D-curve breakers are more sensitive to tripping than B- and C-curve breakers, making them unsuitable for circuits with low inrush currents.

What is a C-curve breaker?

C-curve breakers are commonly used to protect circuits with devices that have a relatively low inrush current, such as lighting, outlets, household appliances, and small machinery. These breakers handle 5-10 times the nominal current and react slower to overloads and short circuits compared to B-curve breakers, as their tripping current is higher.

What is a D-trip circuit breaker?

Breakthrough current is the maximum current that the circuit breaker can safely stop in the event of a short circuit. D-trip circuit breakers prevent nuisance tripping, so they are best for equipment that has a high spike in current at startup, such as transformers, power supplies, and heaters.
